Bio

Jennifer Kelly, a professor in the Department of Educational Policy Studies at the University of Alberta, is the author of several journal articles and three books. Her current areas of interest and research include racialization, immigration, and the social historical formation of African Canadian communities in Alberta. Some of her past research projects include an exploration of how processes of immigration and racialization affected the social formation of African Canadian communities in Alberta from the 1900s to the 1960s.
