This professional masters degree program prepares graduates to take on leadership roles in public sector organizations and communities.

The Master of Leadership and Community Engagement (MLCE) is a professional masters degree offered by the Graduate Program in Education that prepares graduates to advance in leadership roles in public sector organizations and communities, with a focus on community engagement and innovation. The program is designed for individuals who are working in a wide range of contexts, including educational settings, community organizations, non-governmental organizations and other public sector areas, such as health care, child and youth services, libraries, arts and culture institutions and recreational programs.

The program focuses on leadership, policy, program design and evaluation, community engagement and social justice. It draws on the multi-disciplinary experiences of the individuals in the class in order to develop a professional network of practitioners.

This is a part-time professional cohort-based program that is open every two years. Students take all classes together.

All students will participate in blended and online coursework and two community placements.

COMMUNITY PLACEMENTS

Students will participate in two 50-hour placements in public sector or other community-engaged organizations or settings. The Faculty is well positioned to secure these placements based on our existing relationships with a number of organizations. Our staff will help students arrange placements that accommodate their personal and professional needs. Students may also arrange their own placement in their place of employment with approval.
